

New pediatric unit to provide care for some of our bravest patients

Natasha Cruce holds her son Logan Cruce during the July 1 Shands Children's Hospital at UF Pediatric Immunocompromised Unit ribbon-cutting celebration. Logan will turn 2 on Aug. 1. He is a leukemia patient at Shands Children's Hospital, who is receiving chemotherapy. He and his mother have already picked out their room in the newly renovated unit. To read more about this very special part of our hospital, go to page 2.

Imagine being a kid with cancer. If you need a bone-marrow transplant, you are confined to your hospital room for about 30 days. CONTINUED ON PAGE 2.

INSIDE Highlights

This past year's events were smashing successes.....4, 5

Funding highlights tell you where the money went6

Dance Marathons at UF, FSU raise nearly $1 million.....7

Celebrity Waiter Night celebrates 25 years7

